Mark Lane, author and anti-war activist who became an international figure when he opposed the Warren Commission's single assassin theory in the John Kennedy assassination, recently conferred with PRG and North Vietnam leaders and expressed dismay at the anti-war movement split.

L.A.F.P. 7/14/72

Lane says he asks the question of every anti-war action, "How would you justify it to the Vietnamese?" Author Don Freed, a friend of Lane's and an activist in the anti-war movement, said that PAC's non support of the anti-war convention can not be justified. He hopes to build links between the anti-war movement and national liberation struggles of non-whites.